The discussion should consider staff relationships, quantity and quality of work, and job knowledge. The evaluation will be in writing and both interviewer and employee will contribute. A record of the performance review will be filed with the employee's records.

The evaluation will consider job clarification, review of hours, benefits, salary, and leave time. An increase in salary will not be automatic with job reviews. It will be dependent upon merit, salary range of such positions, employee's last salary increase date, and approval of the Session.

A performance review may be scheduled at any time by the Chief of Staff to address performance concerns.

Salary levels shall be maintained in a manner internally consistent with performance records, responsive to changes in the cost of living, and in keeping with the church's compensation standards.
